MISS RHEA MITCHELL APPEARS IN OGDEN

Rhea Mitchell, the beautiful Mutual star, who will be seen at the Utah Theatre in the "The Man From Manhattan," is fast becoming recognized as one of the most versatile of screen actresses. During her brief career in the silent drama she has appeared in a number of diversified roles which demanded an actress of power, perception and knowledge of screen technique. In every instance she has covered herself with glory and won encomiums from the critics. Miss Mitchell was born in Portland, Ore., and made her stage appearance at the Alcazar theatre, in San Francisco. She played a season in stock and then went on the road, playing leading roles in the following successes: "The Woman," "The House Next Door," "Prince Chap" and others. She played a season in vaudeville and then gave up the stage for the wider opportunities presented in the silent drama. She made her debut in pictures with the New York Motion Picture Corporation, where she played ingenue leads in several big screen productions.

MRS. JOHN D. ISAACS DIES AT HOSPITAL

Mrs. John D. Isaacs of San Francisco, wife of the consulting engineer of the Southern Pacific railroad, died at 10:30 o'clock last night at the Dea hospital. She was returning from the east, where she had been taken ill, and her death marked the end of a brave race she was making to see her home and family again.

Mrs. Isaacs was taken from Los Angeles Limited train No. 7 yesterday afternoon when it arrived at the local union terminal station and was removed to the Dea hospital in an automobile ambulance. Dr. R. S. Joyce, physician and surgeon of the Salt Lake division of the Southern Pacific, was at hand and found that the woman was suffering from uremic poisoning. She was in intense pain and began sinking shortly after her arrival at the hospital. All efforts to offset the attack of the dread malady were vain and the sick woman passed away at 10:30 o'clock.

The body was removed to the Kirkland mortuary and will be shipped to San Francisco for the funeral and interment.

NOMINEE INTRODUCED BY JUDGE J. A. HOWELL

"Mr. Chairman, fellow citizens: It is impossible for me adequately to express my appreciation of the very generous greeting that you have accorded me. The words of introduction so eloquently spoken have touched me very deeply. I wish that I could make the response that is in my heart, and could tell you how strongly I feel as I witness in city after city, in the favored communities of our land, the demonstration of a splendid patriotic sentiment and a deep seated interest in the vital questions in the campaign. I had not expected to undertake again this sort of activity. The more sheltered life of the bench was very congenial, and I had a very high estimate of the importance of judicial work. But when that summons came from the Chicago convention I admitted of but one course. I responded because it was my duty to respond, but I respond with zest and enthusiasm, because I have but one desire in the few years that may remain to me, and that is to do the utmost, according to my capacity, to serve faithfully the American people wherever they desire that service approved.

"It is particularly gratifying to be the spokesman of a reunited party, for the critical period in which we live does not admit of a division of that historic party whose policies I believe are essential to the upbuilding of the enduring prosperity of this great people. It is for that reason I am here, and glad to be here. I do not speak without proper appreciation of the genuine American feeling that permeates all of our population, regardless of political differences. I have no desire to be serious or to speak in an unworthy way of our friends who disagree with us. We can be friends and still disagree. But I believe if this nation is to be built up in the trying days before us, and we are to achieve our great ideals, we must have the instrumentalities of a party that is truly a national party, with a national outlook and holding the principles of the application of which are essential to the upbuilding of American industry and enterprise throughout our land.

"Why, if what our friends, and I say this good naturedly, but it is a fact in my judgment—if what our friends on the other side had denounced in the years that are passed during their history as unconstitutional, had been regarded as such by the American people we would not have country town talking about (applause.) Their course is embellished by monuments of departed constitutional theories (applause). We know that protection is constitutional. We have tried it. We know that it is necessary. It has been honored constantly by the voice and demands of the American people, and there never was a time when its full application was more needed than at this time. Even our opponents show some recognition of the changing conditions. They tell us there have been 'momentous changes'—that there is an economic revolution; and they propose a tariff commission. What do they want a tariff commission for? To frame a tariff for revenue only? What need is there for a tariff commission to frame a tariff for revenue only?

"Now, I believe in a tariff commission. We need to get facts expertly. We need to get every bit of information we can get.

"Did you ever stop to consider that we have a rather complicated system of government? It is a very well adjusted system of government, but it is not adjusted to our needs. It is a miracle of political achievement. It is almost beyond belief that a group of men, representing communities (ringing the Atlantic, should have developed a plan so adequate in these days of a widely scattered population and of great communities extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It is a system of government that gives us necessary local independence and opportunity for the government of local affairs without interference by those who have no concern with matters exclusively local. We have in our states that beautiful state pride which is the best promise for efficiency in state government. Then we are not a loose confederation of scattered sovereignties, bound together only for the incoherent purpose of general discussion. We are a nation, an indestructible union; we are a nation with adequate national powers. We desire in this complicated system, where both state efficiency and national efficiency are required, to develop the utmost capacity to have our talent for organization both local and national exhibited in a striking manner for it is only by making this extraordinary and useful system work as it was intended to work both locally and nationally that we can take our place worthily among the nations and maintain the success of American enterprise. (Applause.) It is a difficult matter. Elsewhere the whole force of national energy can be turned as will in a different direction. Here we have to consider local and national needs. We have to work with a fine co-ordination and co-operation. We have the difficult task of popular government. We have the generosity of democracy to consider—a very difficult test to meet when we seek to provide efficiency. Can we do it? Let anyone take the trip that I have through the country and see the energy, the power and the capacity both latent and realized of the American people, and he will entertain no doubt that we can do it. Of course, we can do it if we go forward, understanding the emergency which we must meet, and try to upbuild instead of destroy. It is a way for American achievement. Instead of crippling it, extend our trade and our industries, protect our American powers, and utilize them to the utmost, and have a fine feeling of unswerving loyalty and a dominant sense of national unity as Americans. Of course, we can do it, and we are going to do it. (Applause.)

"I like to speak of the view that the world presents to our gaze at this time. We read of the war. Do we really take account of the lessons in its teachings? We look upon it as a military exhibition. So it is, a military exhibition of the fired magnitude, the like of which has never before been seen. We think of the carnage and the horror, of blighted lives, of the killed and the maimed, and of the sacrifice of wealth. We look with dismay upon the strife. Is that all we see? If it is, you miss the most important lesson of the great struggle. In every nation, back of the fighting lines and supporting them is an extraordinary development of national power. There is not an item of resources which is not known and estimated; there is no human power that is not being applied to make the most of it. In every direction there is co-operation, a working together, because the very life of each nation is involved in the struggle, and nothing should be lost or wasted. There is being developed—not only used, but developed—a remarkable capacity. Such organization has never been known among men—such a realization of national power. Now, the lesson is this: Europe will not forget what she has learned. There are those nations that will ever be the same that she was. There will undoubtedly be a social reaction in each case, but the great lesson of co-operation cannot be forgotten. What the nation had, what it means, what its human beings can do, are known and appreciated, and will be rendered. When final peace dawned upon this stricken world, there will emerge nations burdened with debt, but having the economic bases for extraordinary usefulness. Do not suppose that because they are burdened with debt that they are to be regarded as economic rivals whose energy, ability and output may be disregarded. Think of France after the Franco-Prussian war burdened with indemnity by the great burden the war had placed upon her. Then see France in a few years emerging and increasing in power and wealth until before this war she had perhaps the greatest wealth of any nation per capita. Look at lethargic Russia after the Russo-Japanese war. Did you sympathize with those peasants who were bowed down because of the burdens of that war? Then think of Russia in ten years doubling her wealth; Russia, slow and comparatively inert, showing extraordinary power in every direction.

At 4 o'clock Mr. Hughes and his private party consisting of three secretaries, two messengers and a manager of transportation, together with a number of representatives of eastern newspapers and magazines who have accompanied him on the campaign tour through the western country will leave for Salt Lake. The train is scheduled to arrive there at 5 o'clock. Ogden and Salt Lake Republicans who went out to meet the Hughes special at the Utah Nevada line will accompany the party. Tonight Mr. Hughes will address an assemblage in the tabernacle at Salt Lake. He will leave for Cheyenne at midnight, going over the Union Pacific.

Among the Republicans to meet the nominee at the state line were Senator George Sutherland, state chairman, Glen Miller, Governor William Spry, Nepti L. Morris, the candidate for governor of Utah; Congressman Joseph Howell, Mayor W. Mont Perry of Salt Lake; Mayor A. R. Heywood and Samuel G. Dye, Charles R. Hollingsworth, Judge J. A. Howell, T. C. Hoyt, Republican candidate for congress from the First district, and A. D. McCullen of Salt Lake.

The Hughes special crossed the state line at 9:30 o'clock. At 10 the presidential candidate went into conference with Senator Sutherland, Governor Spry and members of the state committee regarding plans for the campaign of the party in the state this fall. No announcements were made as a result of the conference. It was suggested, however, that the party forces would be concentrated to bring about success at the polls in November.

The special arrived here at 12:55, Mountain time. Mr. Hughes and his party were then escorted by the reception committee headed by bands to the Reed hotel. Later members of the party were given an automobile spin about the city. Some of them were taken into Ogden canyon. Shortly before 2 o'clock Mr. Hughes entered the Alhambra theatre. The theatre was packed. His entrance was made amid a tumult of cheers and applause. A crash of applause greeted him when he took the floor to speak.

On the Hughes special, it was stated, the subject of Governor Hiram Johnson's refusal to meet the nominee of the Republican party, when the latter was in California, was discussed. Mr. Hughes made no comment on the California governor's action. It was stated as his belief, however, that the incident would have no material effect on the campaign in California this fall.

Mr. Hughes is still of the belief California will give him a united Republican vote this fall, a prominent Republican said. "The refusal of Governor Johnson to meet him is not expected to have any bearing on the final result. The incident is viewed by Mr. Hughes as not presaging any further division than that already known to the people generally. Mr. Johnson represents a certain faction and it is stated for him that his action in refusing to meet Mr. Hughes is not being sanctioned by the people of that state. Why the California executive should be the only professed Progressive in that state to show his resentment over any attempt at a meeting is a mystery, unless it can be that he is disgruntled."

CARD SHARP WITH A CLEVER DEVICE FOR CHEATING

In the case against William Bradley, a bit of gambling paraphernalia, the like of which has not come into a local public court session in many years, was introduced in public court this morning. It was a card-holding attachment made to fit around the player's forearm, with a folding spring which, manipulated in a manner difficult to detect, draws the card up the player's sleeve or projects it into his hand when wanted.

According to Assistant City Attorney Littlefield, the apparatus was made ostensibly to hold "aces." Bradley stated that he secured the instrument in a local "jewelry shop" for a friend who left it there to be repaired, indicating that one of the railway construction camps in Weber canyon has been invaded by a professional card sharp.

Willford Racker was sentenced to serve 15 days in jail for committing an indecent exposure in Central park. The offense was of an unusually vile nature as stated to the judge by Patrolman Walter Moore, who placed Racker under arrest.

Frank Williams, who was tried yesterday for creating a disturbance at his home on the previous night, was found guilty of the charge and a six months jail sentence was recorded against him. In passing judgment, the court stated that no matter what the provocation, a man had no right to abuse his wife. He then suspended the sentence on the promise of Williams to refrain from the kind of actions that brought him into court.

MRS. DEBORRAS GAINS MENTAL CAPACITY; HUSBAND ARRIVES

Coincident with the arrival of Samuel Deborras from Sacramento, Cal., last evening, his wife, Julia Deborras, resumed her mental equilibrium. Mrs. Deborras was removed from a Union Pacific train two weeks ago, suffering from an attack of insanity. She has since been confined in the county jail. Her husband, after waiting in vain for her to arrive from Rhode Island, gave up hopes of her being alive and discontinued his inquiries. Through the assistance of the sheriff and railroad officials in the California capital, the local sheriff's office was able to locate him. He came on the 6:30 train last night. When he arrived at the jail, his wife was sitting in a padded cell moaning as if her heart were broken. The anxious husband waited in the office while Deputy Sheriff George Ross went to escort his wife to him. As she crept dejectedly across the threshold of the door that leads to the office, "Julia" shrieked "Sam!" shouted Julia. They clung. Deputy Ross retired to the exterior to determine the circumference of the moon. Except intermittent bursts of non-understandable conversation, everything was quiet. When they were untangled she was perfectly sane, and beaming with joy.

The happy couple sallied off to a picture show. A returning found that Deputy Ross had prepared them a bed in the sheriff's private office. Today they went about the city enjoying the same degree of non-chalance to the outer world. The Southern Pacific that left at 3:50 this afternoon, carried the reunited couple to their home in Sacramento.

GREEKS HASTENING FROM ALL POINTS

"South of the Somme yesterday evening after a very lively bombardment directed against Soyecourt wood, the enemy attempted an attack with grenades, which was mastered immediately by our fire. Southwest of this wood an attempted enemy attack was caught under our curtain of fire and the enemy was prevented from leaving his trenches.

"In the Champagne several German surprise attacks on the minor post in the Tahure region were repulsed easily.

"On the right bank of the Meuse the enemy bombarded briskly the positions we captured yesterday between Fleury and Thiaumont work. We took more than 250 prisoners."

More than 250 prisoners including five officers were taken during this attack. There has been a somewhat lively artillery duel in the region of Chenols. Everywhere else the night was relatively quiet.

"Aviation: On August 22 one of our air pilots was attacked by three enemy machines. He succeeded in escaping from his adversaries."

Quiet on East Front.
